By N'Gai Croal Updated on: December 26, 2006 SimCity is the most popular videogame of the year. SimCity EA Sports today announced the latest edition of its ongoing soccer series, SimCity. The new game adds many new tactical and movement features, and will be available for download on February 6. A press release offered more details on the new version of SimCity: - Dribbling: Players must now protect the ball with the shield button. - Shields: SimCity players can now help teammates by using the shield button to deflect passes away. - Interceptions: Similar to defending the ball, players must now attempt to intercept a pass. - New Blitz Moves: New moves are available including "Dribble and Shoot" and "Dribble and Roll." The "06" edition of EA's annual soccer extravaganza features new dribbling, shielding, and tackling moves, encouraging gamers to master the midfield game. In SimCity, you can design your city based on a real-world city from anywhere in the world. Build a subway system, a nuclear power plant, a hospital, and much more to upgrade your city. And if you prefer to focus on soccer, you can create a stadium and more, and then give players orders like "build a stadium" and "play soccer matches." SimCity "06" will be available for download for PC on February 6. It will cost $60 at retail. Check out this week's GameSpot Game of the Week, SimCity. The rapid development of evidence-based medicine has become widespread. Evidence-based medicine has, however, been criticised for being too narrowly defined, for seeking to replace clinical expertise, and for ignoring the social and cultural context of treatment. Evidence-based medicine is based on the premise that patients have the same needs as do the scientific community. In dentistry, it has been acknowledged that patients have similar needs to those of medical patients, and the role of the dentist is becoming more and more focused on that of a health professional. The role of the dentist is thus changing from that of an oral surgeon to that of a primary care 82157476af
